Workshops of the Road.

MCADAM JUNCTION AND ITS SURROUNDINGS—WHAT HAS BEEN DONE IN TWO YEARS—"AN OASIS IN A DESERT"—BUSY WORKSHOPS—THE HOTEL OF THE ROAD.

[St. John Telegraph.]

A Telegraph representative dropped off the fast express at McAdam Junction a few days ago and started across and along the track a few rods to the handsome and inviting offices of the mechanical superintendent of the New Brunswick railway, Mr. George A. Haggerty. "An oasis in a desert" is one term which has been applied to this beauty spot at McAdam, but the comparison is unjust to the busy portion of the railway town. Passing around the spacious and cool veranda which encircles the house, a good view can be obtained of the surroundings, and it is not necessary to remark to any one who has ever passed through the place that the scenes close at hand, in the yard and shops, are more inviting than an inspection of the barren land which surrounds McAdam for miles.

Two years ago when Mr. Haggerty first came to McAdam, it presented a far different appearance from that which meets the gaze of the traveller now. Old rubbish, debris and waste of all kinds were in heaps upon the very spot which now who pass it. From the veranda it is noticeable that the grounds, which contain the offices and garden and which are enclosed by a neat fence, are of a peculiar shape, resembling, in fact, the deck of a Cunard steamer. At each side of the forward part of the grounds stands a water crane which is supplied with water from a large and high tank, directly opposite, to conduct to the locomotive's tender. Between these cranes and somewhat advanced is a hydrant, which would correspond to a vessel's capstan and the huge upturned anchor, somewhat in the rear and in line with the left crane, completes a resemblance which was more the result of accident than design.

To speak of the gravelled walks, the well trimmed borders, flowers and green sward would be describing a spot no less beautiful than the garden of many an affluent gentleman. While looking around, the scribe was joined by Mr. G. A. Haggerty, the genial and

ENTERTAINING "KING" OF MCADAM.

After a pleasant greeting, his attention was directed to the two bears about which so much has been said and written, which were chained a few yards from the veranda. "Ranger" and "Kitty" are the names they respond to, and many a visitor to McAdam stands by the hour and watches their movements—at a respectable distance. Ranger is the older of the two and less inclined to be friendly than his smaller and frolicksome mate Kitty. The latter is inclined to be indolent, preferring to lie at length in her pen to keeping up an almost incessant tramp like Ranger. When her master called her she was on her feet at once and greeting him with a frightful yawn began to ring the huge locomotive bell on one corner of the pen, her usual and imperative signal for "grub." Ranger was first taught this trick, and the more intelligent Kitty soon learned it by observing how

HER COMPANION OBTAINED HIS RATIONS.

When the night express comes in and one of the locomotives pass to the shed, both animals will catch their bell handles and keep up an incessant ringing until the fireman and driver come along and satisfy them with something from their dinner pails. Again in the morning, at break of day, the night watchman is warned in the same fashion that their bearships are hungry, and at the same time the residents of McAdam are warned that another day is at hand. Last summer they were let loose frequently, but they had a fondness for rolling in the office curtains that did not meet with the favor of the proprietor and consequently they forfeited their liberty. In each of their pens is a deep water trough where they delight to lie on warm days. One of the most amusing sights is to see them which are poured into their trough daily. Sitting upon their haunches they will battle the stream with their paws and endeavor to swallow it until they are either full, weary or half drowned. But enough of the bears. Passing on a few steps there is a cage with one old and several young foxes in it. They are very sleepless and regard their visitors with a watchful though not terrified gaze. The deer yard with a pretty tame fawn in it is admired by every person. It seems to thrive excellently well in its small yard and is treated and cared for much better than it would for itself. Doubtless, however, it would prefer liberty.

A few yards further and the machine shops are reached, the place where the actual work of McAdam is done, and as you look around and see nothing out of place, every man at his work only pausing to get a friendly "good morning" from the superintendent, you feel that here the

RIGHT MAN IS IN THE RIGHT PLACE.

At that time the Fredericton express train, from the locomotive to the baggage car, was in the shops undergoing some slight repairs. When a locomotive or a car becomes disabled on the road, no time is lost. The management acts upon the good old adage that a "stitch in time saves nine" and away to McAdam it is sent for the necessary repairs. It would take a first-class machinist and a newspaper man combined, to do justice to the shops and the machinery. A description of them will not be attempted here, but something about a few of the things that caught the eye may be interesting. One of the most interesting, powerful and complete pieces of machinery in the shops, is a puncher and shear, which is furnished with independent power, and what is better still, with attachments by which either the puncher or the shear can be stopped instantly. An inscription on the body of the machine shows that it came from McLea & Marsh, Leeds, Eng., December, 1880, and that the attachment and improvements are the

OUTCOME OF THE GENIUS AND WORK

of Messrs. Benjamin Dayton and George A. Haggerty.

Hasty visits were paid to the paint shop, the car shop, the manufacturing, upholstering and stock rooms, the pattern shed, and last of all the "arcade," as it was familiarly known. The returning train was due in a few minutes when the offices were entered. Here, as everywhere else, one was struck with the neatness and taste displayed in the arrangement. The outside and inside offices were commodious, airy and comfortable, admirable qualities at all times, but especially when the mercury dances in the nineties, as it sometimes does at McAdam.

The sanctum sanctorum of Mr. Haggerty was next visited, the place where his leisure hours and evenings are spent. One would not expect to find an apartment in McAdam provided with all the conveniences which the best room of a modern first-class hotel affords; yet such is the case. Glancing at the walls, an admirable portrait of General Manager Cram is seen. Among the other pictures is a portrait view of the shops of the Texas Pacific railroad, of which Mr. Haggerty was at one time and the locomotive built under his eye, which ran to the New Orleans Exposition and captured a prize as being one of the finest exhibited. In this connexion the following paragraph from a Springfield, Ill., paper, will be of interest:—

"The whistle of the Ohio Southern railroad shops was first on the old Bluebird, or Engine No. 1 on the Springfield, Jackson and Pomeroy. The engine was built by Master Mechanic G. Albert Haggerty, and the whistle was made by him." Another view shows a pretty, cosy residence at Rockhill, Pennsylvania, where Mr. Haggerty was master of machinery of the Huntingdon and East Broadtop railroad, and Rockhill Iron and Coal Company. Among the other wall decorations was the head of a deer at Magaguadavic. But by this time the note book is shut and pocketed, and a run is made by the scribe for the McAdam dining hall, where dinner must be secured before the train leaves. In an ordinary restaurant a man has to wait till within two minutes of train time, before he sees what his appetite longs for, but here it is different. Your dinner is on the table before you can look around and take in the fine dining room and the quiet, yet rapid movements of the waiters. McAdam dining hall has changed since Mr. Ross became proprietor, and Mr. Thurber manager, but it is a change for the better, and now it is the rule and not the exception for passengers from St. Stephen, St. Andrews, Woodstock and points north, to patronize the dining hall en route to St. John and vice versa.

The next time he offered me the ten-dollar bill I dumped the contents of the pail into his hat. 'We're square now,' I said to him. 'Quite so,' was the reply. But when I turned his $10 into the office it was pronounced counterfeit and I, for my smartness, was that much out of pocket."

Boston and Quebec Air Line.

REASONS WHY THE RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS REFUSED TO APPROVE THE LOCATION AS ASKED FOR.

The Boston & Quebec Air Line Railroad petitioned the Railroad Commissioners, June 8, for the approval of the location of a portion of its proposed route from Skowhegan to Jackmantown Plantation, said portion being the section lying between Skowhegan and Solon. This section has been actually surveyed by skilful engineers, while only a preliminary survey has been made of the balance of the proposed route. A hearing on this petition was had in Skowhegan, June 28, the remonstrants being the Somerset Railway and the towns of Norridgewock, Anson and Embden. After a careful consideration of the evidence presented the Commissioners announced their refusal to approve the location as now presented.

The Commissioners say: "The petitioners base their request upon alleged facts submitted to show that the whole line, when completed to its connection with the Canadian Pacific, in Jackmantown Plantation, would become a most important part of a great international thoroughfare, of incalculable value to the State. The existing fact of another railroad charter covering a large portion of the identical route which these petitioners must later on at Carratunk Falls, is utterly ignored by them. They also set aside, apparently with entire indifference, the fact that there are, within five miles of the petitioners' proposed line from Skowhegan to Solon, constructed and in daily operation, ten miles or more of the Somerset railroad, following mostly along the bank of the Kennebec river through and into large and thriving villages, the importance and accommodation of which the petitioners set aside, as they say, for the sole purpose of saving but about six miles of distance. Such an invasion of the chartered rights and prior claims of the Somerset Railroad Company we cannot justify, except upon condition that the main object of the petitioners could not be accomplished otherwise. Of this we are not entirely satisfied. We do not, however, from these suggestions, mean to be understood that we should not approve the whole line contemplated, including the location of the portion now asked for by the petitioners, were that matter to be determined. We are asked to approve not the whole contemplated line but a portion only, viz.: from Skowhegan to Solon, and to find, as we must in order to so approve, that public convenience requires its construction."

The Statute, say the Commissioners, says that: "Before commencing the construction of its road," a corporation shall present to the board of railroad commissioners a petition for the approval of location. The language of the Statute relates to the whole contemplated road, not to a portion of it. If the commissioners should approve the location asked for they might then "commence" the construction of their road—just what the Statute says they shall not do until their entire location has been approved. For these and other reasons stated by the board its approval of the location is withheld.

Alice E. Freeman.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE LOSES A PRESIDENT AND A PROFESSOR GAINS A WIFE.

The recent resignation of Miss Alice E. Freeman, president of Wellesley College, has drawn the attention of the country to one of America's most famous women. The occasion of her withdrawal from her high position is her approaching marriage with a Harvard professor, and is in itself a strong argument against the objections often raised to the higher education of woman, namely, that it disqualifies her for the home. The career of Miss Freeman as a student, teacher, professor, and college president has been almost marvellous, and especially when it is remembered that she is only thirty-three years of age. Graduating from Michigan University, she began teaching in a high school in that State. At the age of twenty-four she was made Professor of History at Wellesley, and four years later, on the resignation of President Howard, was appointed to her present position.

In person, Miss Freeman presents none of the characteristics of the "blue-stocking," for she is slight and girlish in figure, with beautiful brown eyes and with soft hair falling over her forehead in masses of curls. She is very fond of the pretty things dear to girls' hearts, and in spite of the fact that she has received several degrees, she always dresses becomingly, and in the prevailing fashion. Her principal charm, and that to which she owes her unqualified success, is her wonderful power over people, due to a personal magnetism, and to her rare conversational ability.

In 1884 she represented American colleges at the International Collegiate Convention, at London, and was the only woman who addressed the convention, and in fact the only woman who had ever spoken on such occasions.

President Freeman's executive ability is proven by her highly successful administration at Wellesley. The growth and prosperity of that institution during the last six years has been entirely due to her. In that time the average number has increased from three hundred to six hundred. Three new and elegant buildings have been erected by her enterprise, and many scholarships secured by her efforts, and as she leaves Wellesley to enter a sphere which she believes to be the crowning glory of true womanhood, it can be truly said that she has made Wellesley College the leading institution of the kind in this country.

Talking of Fish.

WHAT FISH COMMISSIONER STANLEY SAID FRIDAY.

"I am just coming home from Perry and Pembroke," said Fish Commissioner Stanley, of Dixfield, who sat in the hotel office of Auburn, Friday.

"We have been up there putting in fishways in the Little River. We had an engineer with us to lay out the work, for it is quite as important that it be done scientifically as that a dam should be built scientifically or a water wheel be set scientifically. We have to look after the fishways of the State, and there are a good many of them, although just how many, I do not know exactly."

Discussing the plans of the coming year, Mr. Stanley said that he supposed they would do about as usual—look after the salmon and stock some of the ponds of the State. The salmon (land locked) will be taken from Sebago, as formerly, and the sea-salmon at Orland, on the Penobscot.

"There has never been, in my knowledge, a finer run of Salmon on any river in this portion of the country, than the run of this year on the Penobscot. They have been abundant and of extra large size. Most of the salmon that are caught, you know, are taken in the bay. Few salmon rise to a fly in comparison to the numbers that are in the river."

"Do you think the Penobscot compares in fishing chances with the Canadian Rivers?"

"Yes, sir," was the fish-commissioner's reply, "I do, most emphatically. I don't believe that there is a river in Canada that compares with it. I don't think that there is a pool in Canada from which so many salmon have been taken as that pool at Bangor where the fishing is done."

"As I reckon it, over two hundred salmon have been taken from that pool. When you consider that possibly out of a hundred salmon that are swimming, only two or three, on an average, will rise to a fly, it is easy to comprehend the probable limit of a salmon run when fly fishing is what is termed 'good.'

"A good deal of fishing has been done at Bangor and a good deal of money has been left there by fishermen, this past year. Financially it is a good investment for Maine. We shall take the best care we know to foster and protect the salmon in the Penobscot and Kennebec."

Mr. Stanley thought, Friday morning, that in six or eight years Lake Auburn, with any sort of care, would be literally full of trout. A weir should be put at the brook where they go to spawn; the fish caught; eggs taken and hatched and the fish returned to the lake.

THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1887

It now seems probable that the Democratic election officers who have been indicted for changing the tally lists in Indianapolis will also have to answer to the charge of perjury, as they have been doing some outrageous lying on the witness stand

There is a good deal of Grover Cleveland that is not yet known to the public —New York Graphic

If the unknown quantity is of the same general character as that already made public Mr Cleveland certainly manifests a degree of wisdom he has not yet been credited with in keeping it strictly to himself

David L Wightman, the Cleveland humanitarian valiant and loving for whom the flags came to half mast last week, used to say "In all my experience I have never met a man or woman, however degraded in whom the spark of pure manhood or womanhood was entirely dead, and who would not in time respond, at least a little to kindness"

Members of the Grand Army generally will learn of the death of Comrade George H Patch with deep regret Past Grand Commander of the Department of Massachusetts he was one of the best known and most popular men in the order He always took an active interest in anything pertaining to the good of the organization and was an interesting speaker and forcible writer At the time of his death Mr Patch was the military editor of the Boston Globe

The Troy Times says of the President's St Louis letter "No more extraordinary communication ever emanated from the Chief Magistrate of this country It insults the entire body of veteran Union soldiers composing the Grand Army of the Republic and assails them as disloyal plotters against the head of the nation which they fought to save The labored and clumsy sentences in which the President seeks to convey the impression that he would be subjected to indignity and danger were he to visit St Louis at the time in question involve outrageous imputations upon the character of the veterans"

The Boston Herald says Higgins knew the President had pledged the people that his appointees should not take an active part in politics and knew that the pledge had been repeated and reiterated He also knew that like all of the President's reform pledges it was a mere farce not to be taken seriously The only difference between Higgins and the President is that Higgins is the honester of the two He despises the Mugwumps as cranks and goes right along with his violations of the civil service law while the President makes a hypocritical show of catering to them but gets in his machine work just the same Taken altogether the "reformers" are a queer lot

A special to the New York World from Arizona declares that there is very general indignation in the Territory because the Territorial officials whom the Democratic Governor Zulick who is the President's appointee has filled the offices in his gift with men who are engaged in questionable land transactions The hostility to the official is that the Attorney General refuses to stand by those who desire to bring suits against a land ring The Tucson Star a Democratic paper says that if Gov Zulick does not call for the resignation of this gang of Territorial official scoundrels the Democratic party of Arizona will rise en masse and demand the Governor's removal

Candidate Powell in his speech accepting the nomination of the Ohio Democratic convention said Mr Cleveland is a greater man than Lincoln and a braver one than Grant Mr Cleveland's greatness seems thus far to have been confined to vetoing pension claims and writing ridiculous letters As to his bravery he had the same opportunity to manifest it that Gen Grant and other gallant Union veterans so gloriously accepted, but Mr Cleveland did not seem at all inclined to give the country any practical illustration of his courage or patriotism Such talk as that of Mr Powell's may do well enough for a Democratic convention but it should not be permitted to reach the public as it only serves to place both the speaker and the President in an absurd light No doubt Mr Powell feels under obligations to the President for the effective work performed by his subordinates but he should cancel the debt in a rational manner

In a leading editorial the San Francisco Call says "The Secretary of the Navy has been telegraphing to every South American port orders to United States vessels to repair to Honolulu for the protection of American interests As might have been expected it was not easy to catch the admiral of the station and some time will elapse before the squadron gets to the Islands Happily, no evil consequences are likely to result American interests so far as we know at present, do not seem to be in danger but this is an accident They might have been in very serious danger, and if they had, the protection which Mr. Whitney is now extending might have come too late The situation revives the inquiry Why does not the Government order the Hartford to be repaired? The responsibility for the delay rests on the Secretary of the Navy Congress has appropriated $200 000 for the repair of wooden ships, and Secretary Whitney is at liberty to use the whole amount on one vessel if he pleases A sum of $175,000 will put the Hartford into perfect repair, and an additional expenditure of $100 000 for new machinery and boilers will furnish the Government with an excellent man-of war that will last fourteen years—a vessel that would cost over half a million to build So repaired the Hartford might be kept here as a reserve vessel, to be used in precisely such emergencies as this outbreak at the Islands Had the Hartford been repaired she could have been at Honolulu at the time the uprising against the Government took place, and American interests would have been safe in any event. The Hartford seems destined to be an unlucky ship for Secretary Whitney. His first idea was to break her up and sell her piecemeal to the junkshop. Happily the outburst of public feeling against the destruction of an historical vessel stopped this piece of vandalism in time. Now the old craft is slowly moldering at Mare Island and the Pacific Coast is left without a single vessel to protect its citizens abroad in case of accident, simply because the Secretary does not seem to be able to make up his mind to order the repairs which are understood to be considered indispensable."

A Mugwump sheet credits to a Republican paper the remark that "If Mr Blaine does not call a halt on his following the Republican party must do so for itself." Inasmuch as Mr Blaine's "following" constitutes the great majority of the Republican party the remark of the alleged Republican paper is not so clear as it might be The writer evidently makes the mistake of confounding his personal likes and dislikes for the views of the party organization

And now the Mugwump organs now point to the "unqualified indorsement" of the Ohio Democratic Convention as evidence of the great popularity of President Cleveland. An indorsement from the forgers and ballot-box stuffers who have made the politics of Ohio "smell to heaven, in the language of the Democratic Washington Post does not seem to be particularly complimentary to an alleged reform Administration, but the Mugwumps are ready to accept anything in the shape of an indorsement these days

Congressman Patrick Collins, who is now abroad, was interviewed in London and is reported as saying in reply to a question as to his opinion of the President's chances of a renomination "I do not like to discuss Mr Cleveland for publication, because adverse criticism subjects one only to misconstruction People are fond of saying that the opponents of the President are soreheads but I do not believe that he can be nominated unless the situation changes in a very marked degree He has done so much to get out of line with his party and has made one stupid political blunder after another, so that if he succeeds in being nominated it will be because the Democrats can find no one else " Mr Collins is further reported as saying that he regards Mr Cleveland's battle flag order and his St Louis letter as the "most stupid blunders" "The St Louis letter could not have been more injurious if it had been prepared by his most bitter enemy It can but make every veteran soldier his positive, aggressive enemy." This strong opposition to the President's course which is credited to Mr Collins will be a hard nut for the Administration organs to crack

There appears to be no dispute that these men neglected the work which they are paid by the taxpayers for doing, and devoted themselves to superintending the operations of the heelers employed by the Gorman ring to capture the primaries by fraud intimidation and every other disreputable device known to politics As we understand it no attempt is made to deny that Higgins & Co did what is here charged against them, indeed Higgins is quoted as openly boasting of his achievements after he had returned to Washington —New York Evening Post,

This apostle of bogus reform cannot see what is apparent to every intelligent reader namely, that every shaft it aims at Eugene Higgins really lodges in the breast of Mr Cleveland He knew that Higgins was all the Post now claims he is when he appointed him to the office he holds at the present day Had the President been honest in his reform pretenses he never would have selected a man for an important office who was to his certain knowledge a notorious ward rounder, but he is not honest and therefore he appointed Higgins in spite of the protest of the Civil Service Association, and will keep him at the work of running the Baltimore machine for which he was rewarded with a place at Washington That is the kind of reform Grover Cleveland believes in

A Great Movement

According to the statistical report of the Sunday schools in the United States rendered at the late International Convention held in Chicago, there has been an increase in the scholar membership of all the Sunday schools in the United States since 1884 of 165,645 It is interesting to know by what agencies this increase has been secured, for it shows that a great missionary work has been done to bring an army of 35,000 into active membership with our Sunday schools No more important work can be conceived of, for it has to do with the destiny of our entire country

The three last annual reports of the American Sunday School Union the old undenominational Society "that cares for the children who are provided for by no one else, show that since 1884, it has brought 185 044 children into 4,947 new Sunday schools, a number equal to 5,000 more than one-half of all the increase reported as having been secured by this and all other agencies during these three years But this American Sunday School Union did more than this—it aided ,825 other schools, which have 46,774 teachers and 315,711 scholars,—so that in these three years it reached 9,872 communities and Sunday schools, and 760,748 children and youth, and then re-aided and re-visited these schools 9,215 times, besides making 92 584 visits to families, supplying 45,019 destitute persons with the Scriptures and holding 27 247 religious meetings

That there is great need for more of just such work in our country, is evident from the fact that according to the International Secretary's report there are but 3,034,478 scholars in all the Sunday schools in the United States, that report to this convention, which the chairman of the Executive Committee said was five per cent too small If five per cent were added, we have 8,436,201 scholars in all our Sunday schools But the statement was made that twenty per cent should be deducted for those over twenty-one and under six years of age, and those who attend more than one school and are counted twice, which deducted would leave 6,748,961 children and youth of school age in all our Sunday schools, while there are at least 9,000,000 more children of that age in our country, and very likely most of them attend no Sunday school

Truly the American Sunday School Union is doing a great work, for present and future America for which there is most urgent need Any who would like to read its last annual report, or aid its work by gift of funds may send to Horrible Recklessness.

[Poughkeepsie Eagle]

People who have been watching the erection of the false work at the east shore anchorage pier at the bridge and out in the river between piers 2 and 3 have been wonderfully interested in the agility and what seemed to them dare-devil recklessness of the trained men on the job They have seen them crawling along the girders and braces nearly a hundred feet high, leaping from timber to timber, or running along the narrow planking, now stooping over to aid in the hoisting of timber or iron, now standing on the extreme edge of the river front of work peering down upon the rocks and river below, or going along hand over hand among the braces with apparently as much ease and comfort as though moving along on terra firma.

"They are all used to that kind of work," said General Field, of the Union Bridge Company, "and have no fear whatever. When we were building the cantilever over the whirlpool rapids of Niagara, two hundred and forty feet above the rushing waters, they were just as daring as they are here. I remember when we had the job about completed I was up there one day. The cantilever arms were then within fifty feet of each other, and it was decided to connect them temporarily with a plank. This plank was fifty five feet in length, about two and a half feet of each end resting on the Cantilever arms. The foreman had issued a strict order prohibiting any one of the men from crossing the plank until it was firmly fastened at each end, the penalty being immediate dismissal

There had been a great deal of talk among the men as to who would be the first one to cross. I was standing on the American side looking at the structure, when I saw one of the men walk out on the plank, look at it a minute, then looked down into the whirlpool below. I felt that he was going to cross the plank, but I was too far from him to make him hear. He waited a second or two, and then deliberately walked out on the plank, and when he reached the middle of it he stooped over, seizing the edges of the plank with both hands and, throwing his feet up, he stood on his head and kicked his heels and shouted to the terrified lookers on He must have been a minute doing it, but I felt as though it was half an hour. After satisfying himself that he had kicked enough, he regained his equilibrium and then trotted along the plank to the opposite side from where he started, seized hold of one of the iron braces of the cantilever and went down it head first, hand over hand, to the bottom I never saw anything like it before Of course, the foreman discharged him and he was laid off two or three days, when I sent for him. He was one of the best men on the job, and I talked to him like a Dutch uncle and put him to work again These men have no fear, they are brought up to the business and feel just as safe one hundred and fifty feet in the air as they do on the ground Of course, I can see how the people wonder at such things, but we have got used to it The best time to see them travel is at the dinner hour, or when the day's work is completed "

"RAPID,"
A Double-Action
ICE-CREAM
FREEZER.
PATENTED.

The 'Rapid' is the result of a careful study of the requirements of an efficient durable and economical Freezer The principles of its construction present the following meritorious points

Active circulation of the material to be frozen between the circumference and centre of the can insuring rapid freezing

Double action of the can and beater, these revolving at high speed in opposite directions, gives the desired result with much saving of time and labor

The acceptable form of the beater, producing a very smooth quality of Ice-Cream, and, by aeration, increasing its bulk two-fold

An improved "scraper," which adjusting itself AUTOMATICALLY, to the side of the can, thoroughly removes the frozen cream adhering thereto, the same being replaced by the less frozen portion transferred from the centre by the action of the beater

The enlarged capacity of the can, which is guaranteed to hold fully five per cent more than the quantity designated

The unusual capacity of the tub, which permits of entirely covering the TOP, as well as the sides of the can, with the ice and salt.

The special pattern of the iron cross bar, carrying the gear wheels, which presents no obstruction when filling the tub with the ice and salt.

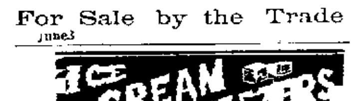

The careful and accurate fitting of the working parts, by which are gained ease in operation and economy in wear.

The choice character of the materials used, the tub of white cedar, the can of heavy tin plate, with solid iron cover and bottom, and all the iron parts galvanized to prevent rust

He finally consented to make the tour of the Trossachs on Monday next with his family, but insisted that after that he should take the first convenient boat for home. THE FATE OF STANLEY.

Interviews Which Shed No Light.

NEW YORK, July 27. The Herald's Washington despatch has interviews with W. P. Tisdel, late Commissioner to the Free State of the Congo, from the United States, and Lieut. Emery W. Taunt, of the Navy, who has just returned from a two years' exploration of the Congo River, in reference to the reported death of Henry M. Stanley. Both, after carefully reviewing all the published rumors of Stanley's death, declare positively their belief that Stanley was not murdered and say that it is quite unlikely that he was drowned, except in case of a panic on the boat, in which event, as the river is treacherous, the result would be hard to tell.

To-night a commemorative banquet will be given to the General Society by the Rhode Island Society at the Casino Theatre.

OHIO REPUBLICANS.

Opening of the State Convention Yesterday.

Preliminary Action on the Sherman Resolutions.

The Convention Adjourns to this Forenoon.

TOLEDO, July 27. The Republican Convention was called to order in Memorial Hall at 4 P. M. by Chairman Brinsmade, of the Central Committee. Hon. Daniel Ryan, of Portsmouth, was elected temporary chairman. In introducing him Mr. Brinsmade made a brief but stirring address, in which he eulogized Sherman and Foraker and referred to the work of the last Republican Legislature in complimentary terms. The reference to Foraker was received with loud applause. When the name of Sherman was mentioned the audience went wild; then there was a lull, but when the speaker proceeded to say that Sherman's public career had been equalled by few and excelled by none and was well worthy of the highest place in the gift of the Nation, the enthusiasm grew in intensity.

The address of the temporary chairman was vigorous. He denounced the Democrats of the State in unsparing terms; declaring that it insulted the intelligence of the State when it sought to sneak into on the present platform. From this he proceeded, interrupted every moment by applause, to say: Gentlemen—The deeds of the Democrats have been the richest auguries of Republican success. The year has been crowded with Democratic mistakes. This year, with this Convention begins the Presidential battle of 1888. Let this Convention to-day name Ohio's choice for President. You know whom I mean. There is but one man for Ohioans now, whatever there may have been in the past. For twenty-eight years the Republican party of Ohio have trusted, loved, and honored John Sherman; let us show to the Republicans of the country that we love, honor, and trust him still.

Let us give him such a sincere enthusiastic and determined endorsement as is befitting so distinguished a fellow citizen, whose deeds will live in the Nation's history, as do those of Alexander Hamilton. The Republicans of Ohio, from whose midst came a Grant, a Hayes, and a Garfield cannot, with credit to themselves, do less. This is an opportunity, let us grasp it. The people of the country are ready for Sherman. They have not forgotten the past. They have forgiven it, but will not follow Bourbonism which seeks to revive the principles of the lost cause. They are marching in another direction and as sure as November comes we will elect Foraker and the State ticket. Then let us turn to 1888 and try to put John Sherman in the White House.

An Outburst of Enthusiasm.

The conclusion of the speech was received with another outburst of enthusiasm, delegates on the floor and spectators in the balconies vieing with each other in the heartiness of their demonstrations, while the occupants of the ladies' galleries waved their handkerchiefs and clapped their hands.

When quiet was restored the roll of districts was called for members of the various committees. Fully half an hour was thus occupied.

The 21st and last district was hardly completed when, from the center of the hall, the well known voice of Congressman Grosvenor was heard to claim recognition.

Instantly all eyes were turned in his direction. In short and measured terms he commenced: "I have a resolution to offer," then he paused and the pause was fatal, for the time being, to the matter he had in hand, for taking advantage of it ex-Speaker Keifer shouted: "I move that all resolutions be read and referred to the committee on resolutions without debate." The motion was seconded in a dozen quarters, and carried by a large majority, although the "Noes" managed to make a great deal of noise. By this time Mr. Grosvenor's resolution had reached the platform. It read as follows: "Recognizing, as the Republicans of Ohio always do, the gifted and tried statesmen of the Republican party of other states, loyal and unfaltering in their devotion to the success of the organization in 1888,

Under Whatever Standard Bearer

the Republican National Convention may select, they have just pride in the record and career of John Sherman as a member of the Republican party and a statesman of fidelity, experience and great ability. His career as a statesman began with the first of the Republican party and he has grown and developed with that organization. Recognizing his genius and patriotism to the Constitution and believing his nomination for the office of President would be wise and judicious, we respectfully present his name to the people of the United States as a candidate, and announce our hearty and cordial support of him for that office."

No sooner was this read than Col. J. G. Munson, of Zanesville, rose and offered the ultimatum of the anti-Sherman men in the following: "Resolved, That we hereby pledge the united and enthusiastic support of the Republicans of Ohio

To the Nominee of the Next

National Republican Convention, and in this connection we call the attention of the Republicans of Ohio to the earnest services and splendid career of Hon. John Sherman."

Both resolutions were referred without debate. The places of meetings of committees were then announced and the convention adjourned until 10 A. M.

The two resolutions above given are now in the hands of the Committee on Resolutions. The opponents of the Sherman endorsement offer to let the second resolution pass unanimously, but declare that they will fight the Grosvenor resolution on the floor of the convention to the bitterest end. The committee went into session at 7 o'clock and will be at work most of the night. The committee contains Dr. Condon, who will nominate Foraker, ex-Gov. Foster, John A. Bingham and Congressman McKinley.

The Sherman and Anti-Sherman Men.

The Sherman men are largely in the majority on the committee, 16 to 5, it is said, and the Grosvenor resolution will undoubtedly be reported to the convention. Then the Blaine men will move the substitute of Munson and the fight will be thrown into the convention. The anti-Sherman made an earnest but unsuccessful attempt to effect a compromise. They have also placed in circulation, for signatures, a paper by which those who attach their names are put on record as declaring that they have no power or authority to vote on the Presidential question; that they were elected simply to help make a State ticket; that a vote either way on endorsement will compromise them in their districts. If enough signers can be obtained to this to make it formidable an effort will be made to get it before the convention to-morrow.

Senator Sherman Much Irritated.

Senator Sherman was much irritated at the tactics of the opposition and remarked to a reporter that some people were treating him as though he was a poor boy after husks. "They seem to think I have no right here" he added, but they forget that I am a delegate and as much entitled to be here as they."

The Committee on Resolutions Unanimous.

At 11 the Committee on Resolutions passed the resolution absolutely and unqualifiedly endorsing Senator Sherman for the Presidency by a vote of 18 to 3, which was afterwards made unanimous.

The platform reaffirms the Dow law and favors such additions thereto as seem to be demanded by the enlightened spirit of the age; takes a strong protective ground regarding the tariff and is emphatic in condemnation of the importation of foreign contract labor; condemns the Democratic party of Ohio in strong terms and on other points takes the usual Republican position.

MARYLAND DEMOCRATS.

State Convention at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, July 27. The Democratic State Convention for the nomination of Governor, Attorney General and Comptroller, was called to order at 12.20 P. M. to-day, by United States Senator Gorman, chairman of the State Central Executive Committee. Senator Gorman resigned from the committee.

Section 3 of the platform is as follows: That whilst the Democratic party in Maryland believes in upright civil service in the administration of the Government it is nevertheless opposed to a system of life tenure and, to a civil pension list, and whilst it upholds the President of the United States in his efforts to effect an honest and competent civil service, still it believes the service should be composed of officers and employes who are not antagonistic to the success of the administration under which they serve, but are in sympathy with it, whose hearts are in the work and who believe that on the continued and just success of the Democratic party rests the safety and security of Republican institutions and the liberties of the people.

Section four reaffirms the National Democratic platform of 1884, in demanding a revision of the election laws recommended, as also is annual registration. The law recommended embraces the beneficial provisions of the Tilden act.

The platform was adopted.

The nominations for Governor were then in order. Bernard Carter nominated James Hodges, Mayor of Baltimore; Hon. Frank T. Shaw placed in nomination Frank Brown, of Carroll; James McSherry did the same for Col. Victor Baughman, of Fredericksburg; W. McMun nominated Hon. Stephen Archer; James Ellgood named Senator E. Jackson, of Wicomic. The first ballot resulted: Hodges, 25; Brown, 21; Jackson, 34; Baughman, 23; Archer, 9. Jackson was nominated on the sixth ballot. The vote was Brown, 13; Jackson, 65; Baughman, 34; Archer, 5.

The ticket was completed by nominating Louis Baughman for Controller, and Hon. William Pinkney White, for Attorney-General.

The strikers before attacking the new hands paraded the streets with red flags.

The officers traced him to Needham, where he was found suffering from a shot wound near the heart that may prove fatal. After disposing of the second outfit he went home and called on his girl. She refused to see him, which so enraged him that he took a revolver and fired three bullets at himself, one taking effect as stated. Crowley, if ever able to make the journey, will be brought here for horse stealing.

The Northport people are strongly talking of having a regatta either of sailing or rowing, or both, and it is possible that such an event may take place there soon. An excellent course for a regatta is furnished in the bay in the vicinity of Northport, and many fast yachts would enter for the affair. A fine race could be arranged and much interest awakened in the result.

Rafting is going on quite slowly up river and rather too slowly for the number of logs that there are to be rafted. The mills are all working briskly and smoothly with just about enough to do to keep them running at a good rate. The water has been raised about fourteen inches by the rains and there is now plenty for the saw mills. There is no trouble at present from back water.

ALONG THE DOCKS. It has been very foggy down river and in the bay for the last three or four days, and steamers and sailing vessels have had a hard time of it, being obliged to make their way slowly and in many cases not making it at all. There have been no vessel arrivals of any consequence in this port since last Saturday, although there are a number on the way that would have been here before had it not been for the storm and heavy fog. The docks at present wear a somewhat deserted appearance in contrast with the first of the season, but it is probable that a more business-like appearance will be assumed soon, as those vessels now on the way are expected to arrive in a much...

BATTEAUX FOR THE AMAZON. Mr. Guy Carleton, the batteaux builder of Old Town, is building six batteaux for a New York syndicate which does a trading business with the South American natives on the Amazon river. The syndicate owns a steamer which carries the goods to be traded on the main river and the batteaux will be used on the small streams that empty into the river. Boats were needed that would run safely in swift, shallow water and the syndicate sent to Mr. Carleton for such boats as the lumbermen use in this part. The batteaux will be finished in about a week and sent on to New York. They will answer the purpose well, being probably the best build of boats made for that object.

HOWE CAUGHT AT LAST. A private despatch received by the WHIG yesterday from Captain Ira B. Gardner, dated at Portsmouth, N. H., says: "I have got Frank Howe and six hundred dollars." Later an Associated Press despatch said: "Frank Howe, of Houlton, Me., was arrested here this afternoon charged with the larceny of $1,000 from Mr. Darling, of Patten, a few days since. Howe has been in Laconia, N. H., and has been spending money freely. On his person was found a handsome gold watch and jewelry bought with part of the money. Six-hundred dollars was also taken from him. Howe confessed and will be taken back to Maine for trial to-day, he consenting to go without a requisition." This news was not unexpected, as the WHIG was in possession of information that Howe had gone from Laconia to Rye Beach, and knowing that Captain Gardner was hard on his trail his capture was very certain to speedily occur. Mr. Darling may well congratulate himself upon the recovery of so large a portion of the stolen funds.

A. O. H. Excursion.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians made their annual excursion to Maranacook yesterday, leaving this city at 7.35 A. M. The party from this city numbered about 600 and numbers were added on the way, making the whole party that assembled at the Lake about 1,000. The Bangor Band and Andrews' Orchestra accompanied the excursion and fine music was rendered during the day by both organizations. The athletic sports began at two o'clock with a sparring exhibition by the Daley Brothers, of this city, Mike and William, and was followed by an amateur race, 100 yards dash. The contestants were William Haines of Bangor, W. H. O'Brien of Portland, M. McManus and Frank Daley of Lewiston, was won by William Haines, in straight heats, in 11¾ seconds. The professional race of the same distance, was contested by Charles Budway of Orono, McGowen of Portland, and William Haines of Bangor. Budway won the first heat in 11½ seconds and William Haines the next two and the race in 11¾, with James McGowen third. A three-legged race was won by Dennis and John Daley, of this city, McManus and Daley second. The fat men's race was run by John R. Hickson, —— Withee, and John Kelley, of Bangor, and G. J. Bean, of Lewiston. Bean won, with Kelley second.

The next was the standing broad jump with eight contestants. G. J. Bean, of Lewiston, won first place and F. McMullen, of Bangor, second. In the three standing jumps there were six contestants. Charles Budway, of Orono, won the first place, with E. G. Moody, of Waterville, second. The potato race, the entries being boys, Johnnie Golden, of Bangor, won the first and James Cox, of Bangor, second. The boat race was very exciting and four boats with a lady captain for each boat started. The prize was a gold ring. The race was won by Miss Mary Sullivan's crew composed of Messrs. Dennis and Charles Cullinan, all of this city. The throwing of the hammer and putting the stone were omitted owing to the want of time.

Dancing was indulged in during the day in the pavilion, Andrews' Orchestra rendering excellent music for the occasion. The day was all that could have been desired and the occasion was greatly enjoyed by all of the excursionists. The party reached the city on the return at about nine o'clock.

BASE BALL.

Rocklands vs. Bangors.

The game yesterday afternoon at Maplewood between the Rocklands and Bangors was characterized by a large error column on both sides and free batting on the part of the Rocklands. The errors on the Bangors were very costly, and Lang, Piggott and Neary were the only players who did not have at least one. Lynch showed that as a center fielder he is not a success and he made five bad errors on five chances. Leahy was batted all over the field and couldn't puzzle the visitors a little bit. Goodwin played well at third, making some pretty stops and throws. Piggott covered first in good form. Day took care of a number of grounders finely, and Lang caught some good flies.

For the Rocklands, Cook, Frederick and Dodd caught some difficult flies and the latter batted heavily. Lyons pitched a good game and at times was puzzling. Quinn made a rattling hit to center for a home run. Morrison umpired the game very satisfactorily to both teams. The following is the score:

Notes.

The Directors of the Base Ball Association state that they are doing all that is possible to strengthen the team, but the players whom they could obtain if the treasury was full, are too high priced. The expenses of running the team have been large and the patronage has not been what it ought.

Lynch was released last night and has been engaged by the Rocklands. He will play with them to-day at Belfast.

McDermott will be here in season to play second base in to-morrow's game at Maplewood with the Belfasts.

Day and Lang will be the battery to-morrow. Macaffree will play short stop and Larrabee center field.

The Rocklands leave this city this morning for Belfast on the Mary Morgan and will play the Belfasts in the afternoon.

Lovely has telegraphed that he will be unable to play here owing to an injury lately received.

OBITUARY.

Hebron Luce.

Mr. Hebron Luce, one of our oldest and best-known citizens, passed away in this city, Wednesday morning, at an early hour, at his residence on the Cram road, at the advanced age of seventy-five years, eleven months. Mr. Luce has a host of friends in this city and the surrounding towns, by whom his sudden death will be heard of with great regret. He was the son of Daniel Luce, of Industry, Maine. Being a sound practical farmer, he always has taken a great interest in agricultural organizations; was one of the charter members of the Penobscot County Agricultural Society, and also of the Penobscot County Farmers' Club, and was President of the latter organization for a number of years, enjoying the respect and confidence of all its members. In fact, he took a deep interest in all the organizations of the day, whose objects are to aid in promoting the interests, improving the condition and increasing the influence of the industrial classes, by enlightening their minds, strengthening their affections and sympathies, and elevating their characters as members of society, and as citizens of the State and Nation. He was President of the old Washingtonian Society, and earnestly and warmly encouraged all temperance movements. While he was plain and unassuming in his manners, he had distinct, firm and well-defined convictions on all political questions, and expressed his sentiments without fear or equivocation. His funeral will take place at his residence on the Cram road in this city, this afternoon at half-past two o'clock.

Catarrh to Consumption.

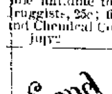

Catarrh in its destructive force stands next to and undoubtedly leads on to consumption. It is therefore singular that those afflicted with this fearful disease should not make it the object of their lives to rid themselves of it. Deceptive remedies concocted by ignorant pretenders to medical knowledge have weakened the confidence of the great majority of sufferers in all advertised remedies. They become resigned to a life of misery rather than torture themselves with doubtful palliatives.

But this will never do. Catarrh must be met at every stage and combated with all our might. In many cases the disease has assumed dangerous symptoms. The bones and cartilage of the nose, the organs of hearing, of seeing and of tasting so affected as to be useless, the uvula so elongated, the throat so inflamed and irritated as to produce a constant and distressing cough.

Sanford's Radical Cure meets every phase of Catarrh, from a simple head cold to the most loathsome and destructive stages. It is local and constitutional. Instant in relieving, permanent in curing, safe, economical and never-failing.

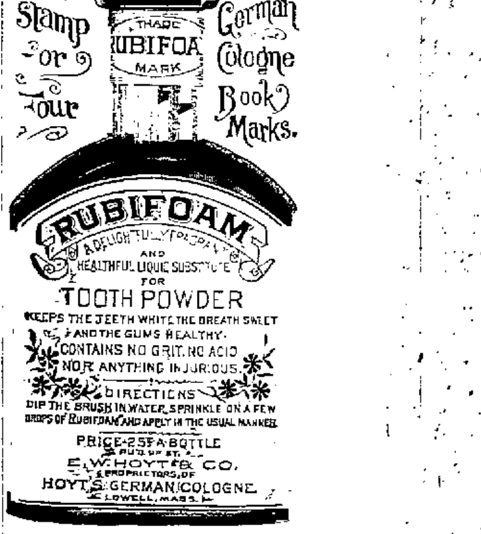

Each package contains one bottle of the Radical Cure, one box Catarrhal Solvent, and an Improved Inhaler, with treatise; price, $1.

THREE ETON BOYS.

BY W. E. NORRIS.

CHAPTER XIII.

Everybody expected that the loss of his grandson would be poor old Lord Staines' deathblow. He himself was of that opinion and at first refused to leave his bed, saying that he had now nothing to live for. But perhaps, upon further thought he may have remembered that he had still certain matters to attend to before quitting a troublesome world, or perhaps he may have been too old and worn out to die of grief. At any rate he did not die, nor did his health appear to suffer, although I believe he was never seen to smile again after Sunning's little coffin was laid in the family vault at Staines court.

Lady Bracknell did not appear at the funeral. It is believed—or at all events it was stated—that she felt unable to face so cruel an ordeal; but the truth, as I afterward heard on excellent authority, was that she was afraid to venture within reach of her husband, who had ordered her away from him immediately after the boy's death, assuring her that he was not master of himself, and that she would do well to keep out of his sight for some time to come. So she took him at his word and fled down to the country, to the house of I forget what friend, who undertook to comfort her in her affliction. Bracknell remained in London, and, as I was told, continued to go to his club every day, to gamble heavily and to drink hard.

I called upon him several times, but he was always out; and one day when I chanced upon him in the street, he told me roughly that I need not trouble to look him up again.

"Kindly meant, I've no doubt," he said; "but I should be very much obliged to my friends if they wouldn't be so—etc., etc:—officious. When I want to be condoled with I'll let them know."

After that I could only leave him to himself. Even if he had been willing to listen to me, I should have been puzzled to discover any plausible form of consolation; and certainly I should not have hit upon that selected by my mother, who in the overflowing kindness of her heart wrote him a long letter, in which she reminded him that among other blessings he still possessed his wife. I believe she was afterward a little ashamed of having taken this bold step, and would never have let me know of it had she been able to resist showing me Bracknell's reply, which was brief and pithy:

"Dear Mrs. Maynard: I told your son the other day that I didn't wish to be condoled with, and I don't. But I must say that I hardly expected to be congratulated. Lady Bracknell is not with me just now, or she would, I am sure, desire me to thank you for speaking of her as a blessing. It is probably the first time in her life that she has been called by that name, and I should think it would be the last. Sincerely yours, BRACKNELL."

My mother shook her head at this. "He ought not to speak so of his wife," she said. And when I brought forward certain excuses on Bracknell's behalf (I would not shock her by mentioning all those that might have been mentioned, nor would she have believed in them if I had) she only shook her head the more, telling me that I had no realizing sense of the sacredness of marriage.

Whether I deserved that rebuke or not is of small consequence, but I might fairly have retorted that my dear mother, for her part, was a little too sublimely indifferent to the worldly side of that contract, and that by her present conduct she was in danger, not only of making two people more unhappy than there was any occasion for, but of getting herself into serious trouble as well. However, I doubt whether anything that I could have said would have prevented her from asking Lady Mildred to come into tea every other day, and then casually getting Jim to meet her. She had made up her mind that this couple ought to be married, and even that it was the will of heaven that they should be married. It would have been too much to expect that the will of heaven should be set aside to please Lord Staines or Mr. Beauchamp, the latter of whom, as my mother pointed out, might have proposed long ago, if he had chosen, but had preferred to go off to Norway and catch salmon.

And so, during the summer, our house was made the scene of what, to a commonplace person like myself, wore very much the appearance of clandestine love making.

Lord Staines' suspicions were at length aroused, and he sent for me to pour them into my ear. It was on a fine autumn day that, in obedience to his summons, I walked up to Staines Court and was shown into the library, where he now sat from morning to night, and where, in spite of the warmth of the weather, a fire was burning. He looked very feeble and broken, bending forward in his chair and holding up a thin, trembling hand to the blaze.

"Maynard," he said, "I want you, like a good fellow, to speak a word of warning to your friend Leigh. I would rather not speak myself, because, as you know, he has been caused trouble and disappointment by our family already, and I should be sorry to seem unfriendly to him. So will you just tell him as kindly as you can that it won't do? I see more than perhaps you young folks suppose, and of course you know what I allude to. It won't do, my dear Maynard. I am sorry for it; but it won't do."

"Lord Staines," I answered boldly, "I am not going to undertake any such commission. I can quite understand your anxiety to keep the Beauchamp property in the family, and if you can get the persons principally concerned to do as you wish, I dare say it will be in some respects a good thing; but I don't choose to be a party to any scheme of that kind. My point of view is not the same as yours. What may become of the Beauchamp property is nothing to me; whereas it is a good deal to me that Jim Leigh should have what he wishes for. I believe that Lady Mildred and he are attached to each other, and, that being so, I hope they will stand up for themselves and marry."

I fully expected that this audacious harangue would call forth an explosion of wrath; but my expectations were not fulfilled. Lord Staines only sighed wearily and said: "God knows I care little enough for money or lands now! My time is almost up, and I suppose Bracknell will be the last of our name. Against Leigh I haven't a word to say, only, as I told you before, it won't do. Mildred must marry Beauchamp. I am under obligations to him which can't be discharged in any other way; and he will be a kind husband to her. We won't argue the point, if you please."

"He will not be a husband of her choosing," I made so bold as to observe, despite his prohibition.

"You don't know what you are talking about," returned the old man, fretfully. "The thing must be, and there's no use in discussing it. If you don't see your way to speaking to your friend, I must speak to Mildred, that's all."

I said nothing about this conversation to those whom it concerned, and whether Lord Staines carried out his intention of remonstrating with Lady Mildred or not I cannot tell. Very likely he did not, for I fancy that he shrunk from distressing her, and he may have thought it needless to take active steps before Beauchamp's return from Norway.

No news with regard to that event reached my ears, and it was not until late in the autumn that I was made aware of its having taken place, by encountering Beauchamp himself at a country house in the north of England where I had been invited to spend a few days. It struck me that our meeting was not a source of unalloyed satisfaction to him. There was even a sort of shamefacedness in his demeanor which I could not at first account for, but which explained itself at dinner time, when Lord and Lady Bracknell made their appearance among several other guests who had arrived late in the afternoon, and when her ladyship exchanged meaning glances with my young friend, after affording him a conventionally polite greeting.

The Bracknell menage, which for a time had been threatened with disruption, had been set agoing once more by the kindly intervention of friends, as I was informed, and was, to all appearances, being conducted upon much the same principles as heretofore. At all events, Bracknell seemed to look with absolute indifference upon the renewal of the flirtation which he once professed himself determined to check. The past few months had worked a very perceptible change in him; he had grown stouter; his complexion had become pasty and his eyelids heavy, and a few gray hairs had appeared about his temples. His manners, too, had distinctly deteriorated. He was bored, and did not attempt to disguise the fact; moreover, he displayed a contradictious and quarrelsome tendency which evidently caused some anxiety to our hostess.

As for Lady Bracknell, she was brilliant and radiant. Her black dress and jet ornaments threw up the dazzling whiteness of her skin; she looked as if she had not a care in the world; and if, as I suspect, the other ladies were whispering to each other what a heartless wretch the woman was, I can only say that in my humble opinion they had a very good right to do so.

Probably neither their remarks nor my opinion were matters of much moment to her. She was a cold hearted and calculating woman, but she was capable, no doubt, of enjoying herself after her own fashion, and few things can be more pleasant than to indulge in your favorite pastime, while making it subserve a definite practical end. This, for the time being, appeared to be Lady Bracknell's enviable lot. The subjugation of Beauchamp was complete. He remained by her side the whole evening through; he scarcely took his eyes off her for a moment; and it may be assumed that he had no idea of the sorry spectacle that he presented to lookers on.

Hilda had a second string to her bow, in the shape of a certain Comte de Vieuzac, a French attaché, whom I had met several times in Wilton place. De Vieuzac was one of those semi-Anglicized Gauls who get their clothes made in London, whose talk is of horses and shooting, and who discuss sport with a solemnity far exceeding that of their models. Being young, by no means bad looking, and full of that confidence in the irresistible nature of his charms, which is the very last thing that his countrymen can bring themselves to part with, he most likely flattered himself that he had made a conquest of Lady Bracknell, and it was easy to see that he found Beauchamp a good deal in the way. That Beauchamp reciprocated his sentiments with interest was not less obvious; and while one of the young men assumed an aggravatingly supercilious mien and the other scowled savagely Hilda, arbitress of the contest, sat between them, displaying her white teeth and gently swaying a black ostrich feather fan.

Somehow or other the sight of that smiling, contented, selfish woman, playing off her admirers one against the other, infuriated me. I could not get the memory of poor little Sunning out of my head while I watched her; it seemed to me that of all forms of depravity the most odious is that which obliterates the natural, animal instinct of maternal love. And my soul being stirred within me by the spectacle of the power possessed and exercised by that woman, who if she had had her deserts would have been picking oakum in Millbank penitentiary, I could at last contain myself no longer, but, rising from my sequestered corner, crossed the room with the intent to do a truly silly thing.

I made straight for the sofa on which Bracknell was sitting apart with his hands in his pockets, and asked him whether he didn't want to smoke.

"Of course I do!" he growled. "Why the dickens don't these people go to bed?"

"We will give them the slip," said I; for I was bent upon having a few words in private with him. "Now is our time, while nobody is looking."

So I got him away to the smoking room, and as soon as we had lighted our cigars, plunged head first into the middle of my subject. "Bracknell," said I, "do you or do you not intend Beauchamp to marry your sister?"

I have mentioned already that Bracknell's manners had deteriorated. He frowned heavily and asked me what the devil that was to me.

"I will tell you," I answered. "You must admit, I think, that you haven't behaved very well to Jim Leigh"—

"Good Lord!" interrupted Bracknell, "are you going back to that old story again? Why, man, I made him an apology when he reappeared in London last summer! What more would you have? I can assure you that I repent from the bottom of my heart of having deprived him of Miss Hilda Turner."

"I don't doubt it," I replied; "I only meant to remind you that you owe him a good turn. I can't go into particulars, because we shall have the other men in here presently, but the long and the short of it is that Lady Mildred and he are in love with each other."

"Oh, indeed," said Bracknell. "Well really, I don't care."

"Does that mean," I inquired, "that you won't oppose their marriage?"

"It means," answered he, "that I shall not bother myself about the matter, one way or the other. Jim had better fight it out with the governor."

I ought, I suppose, to have been contented with that. I had not behaved with my usual circumspection in introducing the subject at all, and I had received an assurance, which, so far as it went, should have been entirely satisfactory to me. But, being so exasperated with Hilda, and being also curious to learn how far Hilda's absolute lack of principle was shared by her husband, I must needs proceed to remark:

"You once told Lady Bracknell in my presence that you would not permit her to entice Beauchamp away from your sister. You have changed your mind as to that, it appears."

Bracknell rose slowly from his chair, advanced to that in which I was seated, and placed a heavy hand on each of my shoulders, looking straight into my eyes. "Maynard," said he, "you aren't a bad sort of fellow, taking you all round, but you're just as cheeky now as you used to be at Eton, and I may as well tell you at once that I'm not in the humor to put up with cheek. Do you remember my giving you a licking once in Keate's lane?"

"No," I replied, "I do not. I remember your hitting me and I remember kicking you on the shins, and I remember old Jim Leigh coming between us."

"Well," said Bracknell, "I dare say it was no bad thing for you that Jim Leigh happened to be handy. I didn't want to thrash you then and I don't want to thrash you now; but if you take upon yourself to interfere with my private affairs a second time, by the Lord, I'll knock your head off your shoulders!"

This threat, which was embellished by certain expressions which I prefer not to transcribe, caused me to reflect. I do not suppose that Bracknell could have knocked my head off my shoulders, but it is quite possible that he might have managed to give me a black eye; and really I cannot afford to be seen going about with a black eye. Therefore I resolved to abstain from further provocation; and at this opportune moment our interview was interrupted by the entrance of our host, accompanied by a large detachment of his guests.

By request, Leroux & Wilton's Consolidated Circus will return to Bangor on Friday and Saturday, July 29th and 30th and give two entertainments each day, afternoon and evening, on the lot on Main street next south from school house. Owing to the inclement weather, of last week it was impossible to produce some of the principal features of the show and many were debarred from visiting our circus, hence the demand for a return visit. The prices for admission will remain the same, 10 cents for children, 20 cents for adults. There will be a grand outside wire ascension just previous to opening the doors at each entertainment.

AN IMPORTANT ELEMENT

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitation, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

Hagan's Magnolia Balm, nearly half a century old, permits no wrinkle to be written on a fair lady's brow.

WHAT HE HAS TO SAY ABOUT IT.

An Easy and a Pleasant Thing to Take It Gave me Sleep and a Restful Life.

I wish to sincerely thank you for the knowledge which you gave me of a remedy for nervous disorders and for neuralgia.

I have been afflicted all my life with attacks of neuralgia affecting principally my face and head giving me at times excruciating pain, disturbing my sleep and appetite and general health, and often rendering me unfit for business. You will see that this affection has been of long standing. These attacks were not continuous, but of an intermittent character, coming and going, making their appearance often like a flash of lightning, without any previous warning, tormenting me for a few days then passing off with a few lingering twinges, only to reappear later on. Besides being hereditary it was no doubt aggravated by nervous and mental irritation and exhaustion, helped on by a faulty digestion and bad nutrition. No doubt the prevailing cause of neuralgia is impoverished or poisoned blood. The seat and lines of attack are the nerves. A great city is not half so full of telegraph wires as the human body is of nerves and neuralgia pains are the most exquisitely afflicting series of sensations from head to hand, and to the most distant portions of the body, a human being is capable of experiencing.

You may be very sure that I was eager to get rid of this infliction, and to this end have tried almost every form of nerve medication; oftentimes it is true with great temporary relief, but never, until I met with Kaskine, with what bore any resemblance to a cure.

When Kaskine (the new quinine) was brought to my notice by a friend it was at a time when one of my attacks was on me in full force. My friend told me that Kaskine (the new quinine) not only acted directly on the blood, disinfecting it of poison, but that it also acted on the digestive and assimilative functions, furnishing new and vivifying blood to the attenuated and throbbing nerves.

I without hesitation began to use it freely and steadily according to the directions, and found that it was not only an easy and a pleasant medicine to take, but also a very effective one. When I began taking Kaskine I was nearly wild with the spasms of pain in my head and face; they were almost unbearable. After a few doses had been taken I was greatly relieved of the paroxysms. I could sleep restfully and eat my food with relish, and I said to myself, "I think that this Kaskine will do the business for me."

I continued its use and was soon a different man; the pains were all gone, the nervous twitches and lightning like twinges of darting agony had disappeared; my depressed spirits rose, and whatever the cause or however it may have wrought, I believe that Kaskine (the new quinine) has proved itself to be the true remedy for neuralgia.

Some months have now elapsed since my neuralgic attack ceased and they have not returned.

I again thank you for making known to me this remedy, and if my "say so" is of any use to you or to others who may be suffering from this dreaded infliction, I am entirely willing that you should use my name in its behalf, as personally I believe in it.

J. J. BENSON,
131 North Pearl St., Albany, N. Y.

P. S.—I will very willingly reply to any letters of inquiry addressed to me at my residence, 131 North Pearl St. Albany, N. Y.

Other letters of a similar character from prominent individuals, which stamp Kaskine (the new quinine) as a remedy of undoubted merit, will be sent on application.
